Erhu	Erhu Performance Demonstration (by LU Yiwen)
	The Erhu generally has two strings, namely the inner string and the outside string, with a bow in between. It is always tuned to the interval of a fifth. In performance and composition, the treble clef is applied in its music notation based on the actual pitch.

Pipa

	The strings of the Pipa are conventionally tuned to A-D-E-A. Players always wear the artificial fingernails for Pipa performance. The grand staff is applied in Pipa music notation based on the actual pitch.

Dizi - Bamboo Flute (including Xiao)

From top to bottom: Bangdi in G-key, Qudi in D-key, Xindi in G key and Xiao in G-key

Dizi Performance Demonstration (By WANG Junkan)

Xiao Performance Demonstration (By WANG Junkan)

The Dizi is a traditional Chinese transverse flute usually made of bamboo. It has six finger-holes, one blowing hole and one membrane hole. The membrane has a great influence on the sound produced by the flute. Qudi and Bangdi are the most predominant among the many varieties of Chinese flute. To satisfy the needs of different music, professional players usually have a set of dizi, each in a different key and size, where the Bangdi in G-key and the Qudi in D-key are most commonly used. A low octave approach in treble staff is applied to Dizi music notation.

The Xindi is a flute without the membrane hole featuring a lower sound which is similar to Dizi but heavier and louder in general listening. The G-key Xindi is often used, which shares the same pitched-range with Xiao. The treble clef is applied based on the actual pitch. In actual practice, Xindi could be replaced by other instruments in a similar range, such as Dadi.

The Xiao is a Chinese vertical end-blown flute generally made of bamboo. Most of the traditional xiao have six finger holes without the membrane hole, featuring a relatively low volume. Today, Xiao is often pitched in G-key, using treble clef in its music notation based on the actual pitch.
